日本を学ぶ
たのしく、ただしく、ためになる

Learn the Japanese language, and experience the Japanese culture. That promotes cross-cultural understanding and exchange.

Japanese Studies Program for Overseas Students

We offer classes appropriate for the levels of individual students.

The characteristics of Japanese Studies Program “Bekka”

Japanese Studies Program sets well-defined academic achievements in Japanese language studies.

We use curriculums, which are organized systematically, with the goal of achieving a high score on the Japanese Language Proficiency Test and the Examination for Japanese University Admission for International Students. We also offer classes to prepare students for the tests.

Special recommendation entrance system

We have a special recommendation entrance system in which students are preferentially enrolled in the Faculty of Economics, Faculty of Business Administration, and the Faculty of Contemporary Policy Studies of Josai University, as well as Josai Junior College, using the recommendation system.

Japanese Studies Program offers special education for international students from areas that do not use Chinese characters.

We use uniquely developed teaching materials (Chinese character cards) to provide special education on Chinese characters for overseas students from areas that do not use Chinese characters.

Representative immigration services

We offer representative services for overseas students for procedures with the immigration office of Japan associated with the status of residence at the time of enrollment in Josai University.

Academic paths after graduation

Because the teachers in charge of each class provide appropriate guidance according to each student's individual goals and abilities, most students go on to universities or graduate schools after completing the course.

The use of facilities at Josai University and participation in school events

Students studying in Japanese Studies Program can use facilities, including libraries, museums, computer facilities, pool, and multipurpose space, in the same way as undergraduate students. In addition, students can take part in club activities and school events. A number of students of Japanese Studies Program participate in a Japanese language speech competition.

Josai University has two Japanese studies programs.

Special Course in the Japanese Language [One-Year Course]

The Special Course in the Japanese Language aims to train students who intend to go to universities in Japan to study the Japanese language in a structured manner and acquire the fundamental skill for university curriculums. The course offers classes for each proficiency level, and students are carefully taught by experts in Japanese language education according to their abilities. Students study the Japanese language using detailed and precise curriculums of grammar, vocabulary, listening, reading, and writing in the classes. After completing the course, students can choose to advance to the Faculty of Economics, Faculty of Business Administration, and the Faculty of Contemporary Policy Studies of Josai University and Josai Junior College. In addition to the students advancing to the Graduate School of Josai, other graduates advance their careers in the world of business.

Going on to university/graduate school after improving Japanese language skills

The graduates of Japanese Studies Program go on to Josai University, as well as undergraduate degree courses and graduate schools around Japan. After completing the undergraduate courses/graduate schools, they find work in Japan, and some of them become teachers in their home countries. It is important that overseas students who aim to move forward in their career in Japan enroll in Japanese Studies Program as a first step to improve Japanese language skills for the future.

Support for international students

The Japanese studies programs support those taking the Japanese-Language Proficiency Test. The Student Affairs Office and International Education Center provide information about scholarships, apartments, etc. to support students' studies and living. The Health Center helps students lead mentally and physically healthy student life.
